A Look Inside Hey! There's a BugaLoo

WRITTEN BY PROFESSOR WORDWORTH

Hey, Professor Wordworth, what is a BugaLoo?

I thought you knew! Not to make a hula-balo, but a BugaLoo is not a kangaroo, not a peeka-boo or a cockatoo.

You see, a BugaLoo is sort of a bug, but not quite. To get it right, it has two big round eyes, that see day and night. A big round body, that comes in all colors—what a sight!

Do they have a home?

Not in a museum, park or zoo, but not quite. They live in a BugaLoo Castleloo. With chimneys, windows, doors and such, you'll find them quite luxurious.

Home Sweet Home Sweet Castleloo!

What else do they wear?

You'll find them out mostly at night when they wear funny hats —it's out-of-sight!

They wear feathered ones and spotted ones, sometimes a nice tuxedo will do or perhaps a sombrero or a top hat too!

They sound scary!

No, no not scary at all. Definitely not very tall. They have many legs—six in all. And they are nicely proportioned —overall.

I'm not scary!

Can they talk?

They speak their own language called Bugaleese. It sounds like something between a sneeze and a wheeze. However, it's mostly "zazz" that you hear when a BugaLoo whispers in your ear.

BugaLooze for Beginnerz

Do they have children?

Oh yes, and BugaLoos love their children very much. Every night they tuck into bed their little BugaLoos with lots of tickles, and hugs, and kisses, and such. Then read them a story before they turn out the light and say "Snugg as a BugaLoo in a BugaLoo" —and Goodnight!

Goodnight Sweet BugaLoo Dreams

That's a lot of legs!

Yes, that makes them remarkable creatures, you see. All together, they can reach a book by three...

He-He-He-He

And change a lightbulb up above... while writing a letter to mom with love. And what is really, really neat, they can tickle with their feet.

What do they like to do?

BugaLoos' favorite things to do is to sing funny songs and to dance the BugaLoo.

But they have too many legs!

That's exactly why they are experts at the BugaLoo. They can show you how to "Doo" it too!

See you later!

Now you know what a BugaLoo is all about. So, if you happen to see one don't forget to shout, "Hey, there's a BugaLoo!"

What do they eat?

Oh, BugaLoos are very picky. They eat all things icky. Especially if the food is green—like patty, spinach, peas or beans.

Spinach, yuck!

It's not the spinach, but the shade of green. They eat everything green, that they've ever seen.

Yum!

Do they live in a city?

BugaLoos live in a BugaLopolis. It's a place that's smaller than a city but bigger than a bus.

That's silly!

Well, and here's another silly fact. If you have ever been there you would remember at the shoe stores, they're "fashion bugs" you see, so they don't find shopping to be a chore.
